Council Plans 'Scat Rat' Campaign

Appomattox Town Council, meeting Monday evening in the Council chambers, heard VPI Extension specialist Glenn Dudderar, of Blacksburg, speak on the subject of rodent control.

Accompanying Mr. Dudderar was Appomattox county extension agent J. A. Smith who reported that he and Mr. Dudderar had made a survey of the town of Appomattox in July, checking on current practices in rodent control and the general sanitation situation within the town limits.

Based on the extension agents' observations, town council concurred with their recommendation that the town (and possibly county) engage in a spirited campaign against rodents, rats in particular. As plans are being discussed now, a "poison" or anti-coagulant would be distributed free of charge to all residents, householders or others who request it. Everyone would be asked to set out bait stations to entice rats to feed on the anti-coagulant bait.

Posters, campaign talks to organizations, newspaper publicity and other means would be used to get the word around to launch a wholesale attack against rats. J. A. Smith says it is his hope that as many people as possible can become involved through individual contact and community organizations. Some thought is being given to expanding what started out to be a town of Appomattox project to become a county-wide effort.

No date has been set for the campaign, but the extension office here invites interested organization heads or others to contribute ideas toward the success of the "Pied Piper" campaign.

In other action Town Council authorized the purchase of more than 3500 feet of cast iron pipe to improve and enlarge the water carrying system along Court Street where widening operations are being planned by the Va. Dept. of Highways.

W. F. Corvello

Corvello Will Replace Thomas

RICHMOND, VA. - Replacing retiring Lt. L. E. Thomas of the State Police, who has been stationed in Appomattox since 1957, will be Sergeant W. F. Corvello, now stationed in Williamsburg, who will be promoted to lieutenant and transferred October 1, Colonel H.W. Burgess, the Department's Superintendent, announced today.

Sergeant Corvello, a native of New Bedford, Mass., joined the Department as a trooper in 1955 after serving three years with the Marine Corps with service in Korea and the rating of sergeant. As a trooper, he served in Windsor, Williamsburg and Portsmouth.

Promoted to sergeant in 1962 he was stationed in West Point, Richmond, Chesapeake and Williamsburg.

Sergeant Corvello is married to the former Cheryl Caravan of Great Bridge in Chesapeake. They have a daughter, Amy, age seven months.

Mrs. Ferguson Speaks At Cancer Society Meeting

The annual meeting of the Appomattox Unit of the American Cancer Society was held on Monday evening, September 20, at the Appomattox Intemediate School Auditorium. The program for the evening was "The Happy Side of Cancer."

The guest speaker for the program was Mrs. Ola Ferguson of this town who told of her bout with cancer. In 1945, Mrs. Ferguson first found out that she had a cancer and the early detection, constant treatment of an extensive nature all attributed to a complete cure.

Dr. C. G. O'Brien, President of the local unit, stated that so many times we hear only the sad side of cancer and think of it as an ugly word that shouldn't be spoken of. People fail to inform the doctors of their symptons. "If people waited as long to be sure of a coranary thrombosis as they do cancer, they would be dead in their homes", said Dr. O'Brien. He went on to say early detection and treatment is most important; also, frequent check-ups are a must. Once detected it's up to the individual to keep up treatments. Dr. O'Brien said, "It's only the patient that gives up . . . the medical professional never does."

The audience was made up of interested town's people and many of the board members.

The Reverend Tommy Lea was called on for the closing supplication.
